

The majority of States showing over-the-year growth in average weekly wages equal to or exceeding the national average in 2008 were located primarily in the Midwest and Southwest.

📍 States showing wage growth marginally below the national average were heavily concentrated in the West.

📍 States showing wage growth significantly below the national average were located throughout the United States.

FIGURE 7 Percent change in average weekly wage by State

2007–2008

